IN HOLDERNESS.
The wind blew over the barley, the wind blew over the wheat,
Where the scarlet poppy tossed her head,
With the hindwood at her feet.
The wind blew over the great blue sea,
In the golden August weather,
Till the tossing corn and the tossing waves
Shed shadow and gleam together.
The wind blew over the barley, the wind blew over the wheat,
The lark sang up to the sunny sky, and shook his ringing notes,
Over the wealth of the smiling land, the sweep of the glittering sea,
"Which is the fairest?" he sang, as he soared o'er the beautiful rivalry.
And with a fuller voice than the wind, a deeper tone than the bird,
Came the answer from the solemn sea, that Nature, pausing, heard,
"The corn will be garnered, the lark will be hushed, at the dawn of wintry weather,
The sun will fly from the snow-piled sky, but I go on forever!"

LAST OF THE SIAMESE TWINS.
Funeral Sermon Preached on the 9th Instant—Large Congregation of People Present—The Greatest Respect Manifested for the Deceased.

(Salem, N. C.) Press.]
The funeral sermon of the Siamese twins was preached by Elder William Turner, at White Plains meeting-house, four miles south of Mt. Airy, on Sunday, 9th instant. A very large number of people, and many from a considerable distance, attended the service.
Born in Siam, in the year 1811, of poor parents, they were induced at the age of eighteen to come to this country by a Captain Coffin, in 1839. During the long voyage the captain learned them to speak the English language tolerably well. Their earlier years were spent in exhibiting themselves in this country and in Europe, under the care of different persons, from which they accumulated a considerable income, which they invested in lands and bonds.
Naturally these twins were intelligent, sprightly, and very hospitable at their homes. They married in Wilkes county, and afterwards settled near Mt. Airy. They were highly esteemed as good citizens, and their word was as good as their bond.
Much has been said to their detriment without any foundation whatever, and the general turnout of the neighborhood to pay them their last tribute of respect goes to show that where they were best known they were most esteemed.
They were considered good business men and conducted their affairs with more than usual success.
The families of the twins number as follows:
Eng had twelve children, five daughters and seven sons. Five dead and seven living. Chang had ten children, seven daughters and three sons. Two of the children are dead and eight living. Two of these, a girl and a boy, are deaf and dumb, and were educated at the institute for the deaf and dumb and blind, at Raleigh. The girl, now a young lady, is married to a tutor in the above institution, and now resides in Italy, still going to school. Another daughter is married to a Mr. Bolejack. All the other children are unmarried.
The impression that the twins adhered to their heathen faith is certainly a mistake. They never connected themselves with any church, but acknowledged the supremacy of God and our reconciliation with him through the death of Jesus Christ.
Ever since Chang was paralyzed in midwinter, on their return from their last tour of exhibition, he was peevish, like most other men would be under like circumstances.
On the day before their death Chang was at his home, it being the last day of their three days' term at his house; although Chang was troubled with a distressing cough, they could not be persuaded to remain, but went to Eng's, and experiencing a very unpleasant night, sat up nearly all the time, watched by a servant. At the earnest solicitation of Eng, Chang finally laid down, and almost immediately fell asleep. A short time thereafter he was noticed as struggling, and the family were called and found him dead, and Eng awake and perfectly conscious. Mrs. Chang was sent for and arrived a short time before Eng died. They lived to the age of 63 years.
This last tribute of respect to the memories of two of the most remarkable twins of our time is due, as much as has been said to their detriment and the circumstances attending their removal to Philadelphia are open wounds in the hearts of the families of the deceased. The appearance of the bodies when they arrived from Philadelphia were natural and but very little changed from the time they left home. The ligament was never severed.
Science has been satisfied, though at the expense of torturing the feelings of the family.

A FREAK OF NATURE.
Singular Bond of Union Between Two Dayton Babies—A Greater Wonder than the Siamese Twins.

[From the Chicago Times.]
DAYTON, OHIO, August 21.—On the night of the 1st of August, Mrs. Mary Hess, wife of D. Hess, living at Pottsdam, Miami county, gave birth to twins, who, as natural curiosities, excel the famed Siamese children. They were both males and fully developed, their combined weight being thirteen and a half pounds. Each had a separate circulation, and they were in all respects two distinct persons, except in a union between them, which was about as follows: The distance from the base of the skull to the point of union was one and a half inches on each side; the length of the union was four and a half inches, extending to the umbilicus, there being one for both; the nipples were two and a half inches apart, and the nipple of the left child was on its back; it was six inches from the joint of the right shoulder of the right child to the left shoulder of the left child; the circumference of the union was eighteen inches, and the entire length of the children was nineteen inches; the bond of union between the two was a bony substance. Both children were born dead, but before internment photographs of them were taken, and a picture of the child in India ink is on exhibition at the gallery of Mrs. Meszice, on East Fifth street, in this city.
Mrs. Hess' father is a blacksmith, and a large sum of money was offered him for the bodies of the children, but he declined them, and after the burial, a guard was placed over the grave to prevent them being stolen away. They were afterward secretly removed and buried in another place, unknown to any person but the parents. The mother was three days in labor, and was attended by Drs. Sigarlost and Robbs. She has been up and well for some time.

Enormous Wealth Wasted.
Since childhood people have been taught that Peru was literally the supply depot of the precious metals of the world. That Peru is rich in mines, no one doubts; but that these mines are sadly neglected, all are informed. Peru is not rich now. That is, her immense wealth is not available. The Chincha Islands were at one time regarded as something marvelous. Guano was brought into public notice, its properties were tried, and its efficacy as a fertilizing agent proved by experiments. Whilst the islands were being divested of a deep layer of the most valuable substance, and hundreds of ships waited for cargoes, money was abundant. It seemed as if the Pizarro age had returned. But the gold has gone, the silver has vanished, and to-day Peru, though a large buyer of other nations' goods, has a copper coinage for change and paper currency for money. And this, too, in the face of the fact that the enormous revenues from the sale of guano poured into the treasury through a series of years. And all the wealth has been wasted, so far as the people of Peru are concerned. Before the accession of President Prado, the government was constantly changing. Military chieftains seized the supreme power, plundered the public treasury, and were hurled from position by the reacting forces of an unstable society. In this way millions of dollars were dissipated or sent out of the country. Many of the political offenders who are privileged to dwell abroad, had provided for themselves, and foreign banks have long held heavy deposits for Peruvian plunderers. Subsidies and subventions, gifts and bestowments to favorites by the supreme dictator of the hour, wasted the wealth of the people, depleted the treasury, discouraged industry, and made Peru poor. The people are poor, the government is poor, society corrupt and vicious. But nature is rich and bountiful. The mountains are filled with precious ores, the forest abounds in valuable woods and medicinal plants, the fields yield abundant harvests, and all the raw elements of wealth and prosperity are concentrated in abundance. There is a gradual improvement taking place in society, and some hope for the future may be safely entertained. But it is but a faint streak of light that gleams athwart the gloom.

I am aware of the responsibility of the position, especially in this the principal district of the state, but promise if I am nominated to use my utmost endeavors to be elected, keeping in view the oath I must take; and if elected, I shall do all in my power to promote the interests of the whole district without regard to county or county lines. JOHN L. SOUTHERN BRANCH
NATIONAL SURGICAL INSTITUTE
Wall street, opp. Passenger Depot, N. Side Atlanta, Georgia.

THIS is an incorporated institution, with ample capital, and a thoroughly organized Surgical and Medical Staff, for the treatment of Congenital and Acquired Deformities of the human body, and diseases of conditions requiring surgical operations, or mechanical appliances for their relief or cure; also, for the treatment of diseases peculiar to females, for paralysis and other affections, as shown in Illustrated Circulars. The Southern Branch is now in successful operation in Atlanta.

The building occupied is of brick, new, large, well ventilated, well furnished, and supplied with machinery power, gymnastic arrangements, Electrical Instruments, vapor, electric galvanic and other Batts, vacuum treatment, movement apparatus, and many other appliances from the original institute in Indianapolis, Ind. An ample corps of skilled assistants, and apparatus makers, have been brought here, and the whole is under the charge of Surgeons of well known ability and skill. Three hundred patients are already under the treatment of the Southern Branch, and the results are highly gratifying, and satisfactory. Call and examine the methods of treatment, and the facilities for carrying forward the work. Address: K. H. BOLAND, Secy National Surgical Institute, may6-dtd ATLANTA, GA.

DR. CALHOUN'S LIVER PILLS.
I AM engaged in the manufacture of the Celebrated Family Medicine, known as the Calhoun Liver and Anti-Bilious Pills, under the supervision and assistance of Dr. Calhoun himself. This Pill has been in use for the last 35 years, and has taken precedence over all other Family preparations by all that have used them. Thousands would certify to their great value if necessary. One fact will supercede any amount of certificates, and that fact is this: Dr. Calhoun has been physician to the Fulton County Prison for over seven years, when the number of prisoners ranged from 30 to 70, laboring under all the diseases incidental to this climate. With but few exceptions they have all been treated with this Pill, and astonishingly so during that long period not a solitary death occurred under his treatment. This fact is worth any amount of testimonials.

I am now prepared to fill orders from druggists, merchants and others. All orders sent me shall receive prompt attention. There is no type of FEVER, DYSPEPSIA, BILIOUSNESS, DYSENTERY, RHEUMATISM, CHOLERA MORBUS, BILIOUSNESS and SICK HEADACHE, or other diseases of a Southern climate, but yield readily to this preparation.

For sale by all druggists.
None genuine unless it bears the signature of N. C. Williams and picture of Dr. Calhoun. Address N. C. WILLIAMS, Post-office Box 340, Atlanta, Ga. Manufactory No. 118, corner Washington and Peters sts., Atlanta, Ga. may14-dtd

An Exhibit of Industry, Population and Development.

Specially Compiled for The Atlanta Constitution.

J. C. MADDOX, clerk of council.

MONROE.

The youthful gusher who sends us the following, we have a great mind to tell on, but we won't this time:

Population 1,000; intelligent, industrious people; some splendid machinery; leading lawyers and earnest, eloquent preachers; the fairest women that ever cultivated flowers, to which pleasant pastime many are warmly devoted. Many of the belles are marriageable, but not by any means anxious to be captured, as each already numbers her slain on Cupid's battlefield by the score. But notwithstanding this havoc, they are not at all bloodthirsty, neither are they fearful to look upon.

Progress: The progress of this town does credit to the energy, enterprise and intelligence of the community. New buildings are going up rapidly on every street; new stores are being opened, and general activity is characteristic of the village. The churches have been renovated, and we can challenge the world for superior educational facilities. But chief among our many progressive enterprises is the Walton railroad, which is now being graded with all possible energy from Social Circle to Monroe. The citizens are enthused and jubilant over the project, and when the whistle of the engine and the rattle and clatter of car wheels are heard on our streets, a new impetus will be given to every interest. A more desirable place to live cannot be found, and since we must die, no place could contribute more to render our departure happy than this beautiful village.

Several thousand bales of cotton are bought at this market every season, and the ruling price competes successfully with other points of better shipping facilities. We need but one thing more to make Monroe an unrivaled place. We need more good citizens to move in and "possess the land." There is ample room for spreading our dimensions indefinitely, and while many are coming in, yet we say to all the rest "come on." Lots at present are cheap, but the price is rapidly enhancing.

DECATUR.

Mr. Williams handed me your card of the 24th, asking for statement of population, progress, business, etc., of Decatur, requesting me to respond, as he could not himself find time to do so. Upon inquiry I find our population to be about 700; no sales of cotton the past year; receipts of cotton 250 bales; sales of merchandise $58,000; the local advantages of the place are: proximity to Atlanta being only six miles, with abundant facilities for passing to and from; very fine water; pleasant, quiet and healthful locality; society remarkable for its social and religious qualities, and for refinement without ostentation or extravagance. Respectfully,

R. C. WOOD, M. D.

DULUTH.

Od. E. Y. Clarke: I take the liberty to answer your enquiries, being one of your subscribers and feeling an especial interest in the prosperity of my town. Population 125; town is improving rapidly; several new houses now in process of erection, both dwelling and business;

The prospects are fair for a big trade this fall. I have receipts for shipment of cotton from this depot (as agent) numbering 2,500 bales, 700 of which was bought and sold by merchants, and of which I shared Connolly in, the remainder was divided between the guano agents and planters around in the country; together with the 700 bales cotton was sold in merchandise $50,000, making upwards of $90,000 worth trade, and our trade is largely increased to that of previous years. I could say a great deal about the advantages of our town in the trading line, but will put it in as condensed a form as possible, as newspaper men want everything to the point. I can safely say we have one of the best locations for a small town of any community on the line of railroad. We have a healthy place, good water, have good, productive lands east and west. Chattahoochee, west, flows through lands better than which no county can boast; produces cane, cotton, wheat, oats, clover, grasses, and everything else common to this country. East, the Sweet-water lands spread out wide, and are equal almost in the production of the above mentioned products. I have given you a brief account of our place, but forgot to mention our schools, etc. We have a fine school and also a fine Sunday school, and a splendid church, though not quite completed; taking all together, think we have a place, the advantages of which equal, or are superior to almost any place on the line of railroad. Hoping you may get such information from this as will serve you and be a benefit to us.

I am yours truly,

J. E. JONES.

THOMSON.

In compliance with your request of the 24th instant, I below give you as accurate report as possible on so short notice, of the aggregate amount of business done in our little city since September, 1873, up to date; also the population of the place and other particulars asked for. The population is estimated at about 1,200; cotton receipts since September 1, 1873, 8,938 bales; the annual shipment is about 10,000 bales; average weight per bale 450; aggregate proceeds of shipments $522,873. Progress since 1865 is very marked and still making rapid strides, despite the panic and the hard times. Number bales cotton sold, 1873, up to date, 4,000; aggregate sale arising from sales $104,624; aggregate amount of merchandise sold since September, 1873, $397,100; total amount arising from mercantile and cotton sales $501,724. The advantages and recommendations of our city are so numerous that if I enumerate them all, I will occupy too much space in your columns; therefore I will mention only a few of the leading features of the place, that render it a desirable place of location, both for business and habitation. The surrounding country is open and populous; the people honest and enterprising; the society as high-toned and moral as any where in Georgia, and the educational and religious advantages are excellent. We have a large merchant mill, recently established. We have an Odd Fellows', a Temperance, and a Masonic lodge, each in a flourishing condition. We have the best fire company in the state, with five hundred and fifty feet of good hose, and a firemen's hall, which will soon be finished, and when it is completed will vie with any in the state for beauty and utility. In addition to this I will say that our little city is growing rapidly, and I venture the assertion that Thomson is head and ears above any place of its size in the southern states. The municipal authorities at present are: H. C. Roney, chairman; Jno. M. Curtis, H. W. Gerald, Jas. L. Hardaway, council, and Dr. E. C. Harrison, secretary.

I am, sir, yours respectfully,

J. E. WHITE.

Editor "McDuffie Journal."

As to that fire company, quite a number propose to test its claim at the state fair.—Eds. Constitution.

DALTON.

County site of Whitfield county, situated at the junction of three railroads, viz: W. & A. R. R., S. R. & D. R. R., and E. T. Va. & Ga. R. R. The city is thirty-eight miles south of Chattanooga, and one hundred miles north of Atlanta, and is regarded as the most important town in north Georgia. The surrounding country fertile, well cultivated and highly productive. Population about 3,000, 400 of whom are negroes. About one hundred buildings erected during the past year, many of them good brick residences and commodious stores; streets wide and regularly laid off and well shaded. There are seven churches, Methodist, two Baptist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Catholic, and Cumberland Presbyterian; all of them good buildings; attending congregations large and intelligent. The place is proverbially healthy. Taxable property within corporate limits assessed at $200,000. Culture of cotton in this region an experiment—not cultivated to any considerable extent before 1873. Annual receipt of cotton about 4,000 bales. The sale of cotton and other merchandise aggregated, say $1,000,000. While there are no large capitalists in the city, there are a number of energetic, responsible and reliable merchants. Mercantile failures have been few. General success has attended the business community of the place. There is a large furniture factory located here known as the Cherokee manufacturing company. The furniture manufactured here compares favorably in style and finish with any manufactured north, and excels much of it in durability and cheapness. One iron foundry with considerable capacity, employing a number of operatives. One manufactory of boots and shoes, employing a large number of hands and sending hundreds of boxes of its product upon the several lines of railroads leading from the place. Our flouring mill of capacity to make one hundred bushels flour per day. Two elegant college buildings erected in 1873 at public expense. The female college offers, in addition to the regular curriculum, musical advantages possessed by few, but unsurpassed by any college in the country. Besides these there are other educational facilities fully up to all requirements, and will compare favorably with any institution of learning in the state. General thrift, industry, intelligence and spirit of progress are the chief characteristics of our people. These together with its location, healthfulness, religious and educational advantages, make it one of the most desirable and promising cities in north Georgia.

The present municipal government consists of a mayor and six members of council, treasurer, clerk, marshal and dept. marshal as follows: T. Keller, mayor, Jas. M. Bivins, Jas. H. Bard,

A. W. Lynne, J. T. Camp, Thos. J.

Hamilton and R. P. O'Neill, councilmen; L. W. Barrett, clerk; W. J. Forth, treasurer; B. K. Hix, marshal and T. B.

Jolley, dept. marshal. Two weekly journals, Citizen and Enterprise.

KINGSTON.

I regret that I have not more time to gather statistics.

Kingston is situated at the junction of the Western and Atlantic and Rome railroads. Owing to the panic, she has not made much progress during the last year.

There was very little cotton sold in the town, there being no arrangements made for buying it, but, about as near as I can find out, about 700 bales were shipped to other places for sale, besides a great deal hailed away of wagons, which would naturally have come here if there had been capital to purchase.

Our natural advantages are great. We are surrounded on all sides by iron ore,

much of which could be worked to advantage; good water power, with one merchant mill already in operation, and another in course of construction, besides other power which might be used to run any kind of machinery. We also have near here the Howard cement and lime works, which cement is equal to any in the United States; also other lime quarries, which are inexhaustible; a good tannery, with every facility, and capable of being increased to any desired size.

Our section is remarkable for good health and pure water. We have a fine and commodious hotel, and last, but not least, we can boast of one of the best schools in Georgia, carried on by Prof.

J. T. Lin, a well known educator. It is one of the best places I know of for parents to send their children, if they desire a healthy, moral place. The only thing we need is capital to make this one of the best towns on the Western and Atlantic railroad, and I think it would be well for men who wish to branch out to look at this place and see its advantages.

Our town council is composed of the following gentlemen: McDonough Harris, chairman; J. B. Burrough, secretary;

A. B. Shotts, H. H. Fear, J. F. Hargis.

Yours respectfully,

MCDONOUGH HARRIS.

Baby carriages have been sold at an average value of $30 each, making the sum of $6,000.

BANKING OPERATIONS.

Our banking capital all told does not exceed $1,500,000. Yet, with the resources, we do not know of any class of men, who have ever achieved such results. During the year, our banks bought and sold $30,000,000 of exchange; $300,000 worth of bonds; and $100,000 of stocks.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

The panic and scarcity of money retarded and cut off materially the sale of musical instruments. The sales foot up only about $25,000.

THE ATLANTA POSTOFFICE.

The operations of the Atlanta postoffice for twelve months is of such a magnitude as demonstrates beyond all cavil that it is a first class office.

The money orders paid out foot up $450,000, and those issued $150,000. One million eight hundred thousand letters are mailed from this point, and two million letters distributed.

Moulton Charges Beecher with Rape

[By Telegraph to The Constitution.]

BROOKLYN, Aug. 29.—The report of the investigating committee was read to-day by Prof. Raymond. During the reading of the report frequent interruptions were caused by applause, which followed passages sustaining Beecher; and outbursts of laughter were drawn out. Any allusion to Moulton and his participation in the matter were received with waiving of handkerchiefs, hats, &c., and the applause which greeted its ending was almost deafening.

During church meeting, after the report had been read, Raymond said: "All that was evidence taken before the committee he claimed that there was not a single line which disproved Henry Ward Beecher's story."

The speaker recapitulated some portions of the evidence taken before the committee, referring to Mr. Moulton's part in the affair. He said Mr. Francis D. Moulton had tried to poison the minds of the people against Mr. Beecher. This seemed to raise Moulton, and standing erect, he glared at the speaker and exclaimed twice, in tones which echoed through the building,

"YOU'RE A LIAR, SIR!"

Instantly all was confusion. Men and women rose to their feet, the latter mounting on the seats, and joining, with a hearty good will, in the cry of "Put him out!" "Shame, sir!" &c., mingled with loud and prolonged hissing, in the midst of which Mr. Holliday came forward, and making himself heard above the din, partially restored order by saying: "Gentlemen, let him sit still and hear the truth."

But Moulton still remained on his feet and glared around like a wild beast at bay.

saying, "I dare you to put me out!" Two police officers appeared behind Moulton, and he took his seat.

The report was unanimously adopted. The police protected Moulton while he was leaving the building. They hurried him down the aisle to where a carriage was waiting, into which he was pushed, rather than helped, and with a police officer standing on each step of the vehicle, he was driven rapidly away.

The audience then quietly dispersed.

"IS MOULTON CRAZY?"

is the line which captures the report of an interview with Moulton, after last night's Plymouth church scenes, wherein Beecher comes to the mutual friend for assistance in a matter of rape which he confessed having committed.

Moulton will hold the documents in this case for court.

The Sun says:

The result of the investigation as to Beecher's innocence is hardly satisfactory, and will not convince the public. Tilton's hot charges against him have failed to be proven, and Beecher's friends still adhere to him as the standard man who is innocent, and so Plymouth church sustains him, and he can continue to preach.

It fears, however, that Beecher will never be able to regain his great position.

The Times considers the result unsatisfactory, and depreciates the ability of Moulton and Tilton contained in the committee's report. It considers that the evidence might have been furnished without this deliberation. The report should have been as free from any appearance of bias as a carefully written judicial decision. In point of fact, however, it bears, in many parts, a close resemblance to the pleading of an advocate for the defense. As a whole it can only be compared to a charge which might be delivered to a jury by a judge strongly convinced of the innocence of the accused. The Times, however, considers that any legal tribunal would have been compelled to adopt the verdict that the evidence in the case fails to sustain the charges.

The Tribune argues that the committee has closed its labors without putting an end to the scandal, or even getting at the heart of the mystery. It believes that the committee, while leaning strongly towards Beecher, have acted honestly. But as Tilton's witnesses refused to testify, the prosecution declined to submit any more evidence, though protesting that he had plenty, and the investigation thus came to an end.

The Tribune holds that Tilton failed to make out his case. The letters he presented are suspicious but not convincing. It believes the verdict of the committee to be justified by facts in the evidence.

The World reviews the committee's report at length, and arrives at the same conclusion as did the committee, but claims that Tilton's charges are not sustained by evidence, and that the better judgment of intelligent people had already enabled them to arrive at this conclusion.

The Herald is not at all satisfied with the result of the investigation. It presumes that Beecher is guilty until he proves his innocence, as culprits generally are held to be guilty until they prove their innocence is proven. But the Herald argues that this case is not to be determined on this standard of justice.

Plymouth church had to retain Beecher in Plymouth pulpit, because the congregation was ready to condemn any offense rather than lose their most eloquent and popular preacher, and they wished to make their course consistent with the defense of high moral standards of Christianity, and so they retained their pastor.

The examination of Beecher by the Plymouth committee resulted as was anticipated, and therefore created no surprise among the friends and members of Plymouth church, and the majority of the citizens of Brooklyn. It is accepted as sufficient, but there are a very large number of citizens in New York are so enthusiastic over the result that, while they don't sympathize with Tilton and Moulton in the least, they think that the committee indulged in might well have been left out; and that Tilton should at least have had some representatives in the committee, which he had not; and, on the whole, therefore, the verdict is only partially satisfactory, and is not regarded as ending the case.

New York, August 29.—Moulton threatens to publish a card, and he delays it in order to secure fac simile copies of the letters. The details promised are intensely odious.

MACON.—Mrs. Thomas Redding a very popular lady died yesterday. The park is looking beautifully. The work is still progressing in it.—Telegraph & Messenger.

A LESSON FOR THE CRITICS.

BY JAMES MAURICE THOMPSON.

A great king once, so I have heard, Went out to hunt a singing bird, Whose voice should be so sweet and strong, So fraught with all the tricks of song, That they who heard it would confess The king's fine taste and perfectness Of judgment. And it came to pass That the king's bird, perched on the grass, Fringed a brooklet's sinuous way.

He saw a bird demure and gray, Of awkward mien and sleepy-eyed, Bathing in the crystal tide.

"O bird!" the king said, looking down, "A monarch, I, of high renown, Out searching for a singing bird, Whose voice, the sweetest ever heard, Shall cheer me in my hours of gloom, And coax my dear loves back to bloom."

"Take me, O king," the gray bird said, "A sad and lonely I've led, Singing with not a soul to hear, Pining for but one word of cheer."

"Thou!" cried the king, half in surprise, A sudden anger in his eyes, "Thou insignificant, nameless bird! Thou ninn! Hast thou never heard Of my grand palace and my throne Of gold and pearl and precious stone? Thou gray, sad-eyed, presumptuous thing! Thou entertain a court and king! Begone! Say not another word: My cage must hold a royal bird."

There came a silken sound of wings Above the brooklet's murmurings; The wind fell still upon the grass; To watch the gray bird upward pass; The sunlight under, softer grew; The leaves took on a tender hue— As if all nature, gently stirred, Bade farewell to the going bird.

The monarch stood with lips compressed, Regret and choler in his breast, While from the sky, well sent and strong, Came back a Partisan shaft of song.

Revenue Receipts.

[By Telegraph to The Constitution.]

WASHINGTON, August 29.—The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $277,755.45. Amount of national bank note currency received at the treasury to-day for redemption foots up $451,158; the total amount aggregates $728,913.45.

New York Bank Statement.

[By Telegraph to The Constitution.]

NEW YORK, August 29.—The city banks statement shows a gain of $440,000; net receipts of the banks and excess over legal requirements is $2,717,675. The following are the comparative differences in the totals of the past two weeks: Loans decreased $256,200; specie decreased $216,800; legal tenders increased $1,301,300; deposits increased $136,000; circulation decreased $16,700.

Shipments of Grain.

[By Telegraph to The Constitution.]

PHILADELPHIA, August 29.—During the past month 350,000 bushels of grain have been shipped for Europe from this port by the American line of steamers alone. The receipts of flour and grain by the Pennsylvania railroad from the west have been unusually large. A few days since, thirteen hundred cars were on the track in west Philadelphia, forming a temporary blockade.

The extent of the panic of last September is graphically portrayed in the commercial statistics for 1873 and 1874. The amount of liabilities of those who failed in the former year is estimated at $121,000,000, and for the latter at $280,000,000. Five thousand one hundred and eighty-three persons, firms and corporations contributed to the financial distress of 1873. Of these failures about one-eighth of the whole number occurred in New York city, and involved the loss of $95,500,000, or about one-third of the whole amount of the losses. This disproportion indicates, at the same time, the immense business of that city, and the amount of wild and reckless speculation.—Commercial.

WHEAT FAILURES IN CHICAGO.—The recent enormous decline in wheat is beginning to show results which may by no means prove exceptional here or west, unless the bottom is reached soon. H. Jackson & Co., of Chicago, failed on Saturday, "long" 80,000 bushels wheat on which he was unable to keep up his margins; also, Horace Barton, from the same cause, failing to respond to a call of $10,000 margin on "long" wheat. Both were old and respected merchants.—Commercial.

IN MEMORIAM.

Oh, we miss you, gentle father,
Our home is lonely now;
The evenings are so cheerless,
We miss your happy brow.
The happy smiles you cheered us with
In happy childhood's years,
Will linger in our heart of hearts
Through all our coming years.
And the dear advice you gave to us
When on your dying bed,
Will guide your children's future steps,
Though our father now is dead.
Your charge was love your mother
And cheer her broken heart;
Do your duty as I have bid you
For my life is ebbing fast.
But now, alas! you have left us here;
God cheer our orphan heart,
And give us grace to follow you
And heal the bitter smart.
Oh, father dear, my thoughts to-night
Go back to childhood years,
When I so often at your knee
Kneelt down to say my prayers.
And then, again, upon your knee
You have danced my heart to glee;
And sang the songs I loved so well,
With a heart so light and free.
Oh, father dear, we miss you;
There's a void within the heart;
God comfort our poor mother,
And heal our bleeding heart.

THE GIBSON MASSACRE.

Wholesale Slaughter of the Other

(Nashville Union.)

Gov. Brown telegraphed the sheriff of Gibson county yesterday morning to know if any assistance was needed, and about 11 A. M. received a dispatch stating that all was quiet and that no further trouble was expected.

STATEMENT OF AN EYE-WITNESS.

A Union and American reporter interviewed a gentleman direct from Trenton yesterday, and obtained from him the following statement of the murderous doing of last Tuesday night:

I happened to be in Trenton on the night of the occurrence. But to give you a correct idea of the affair, I'll tell you the situation.

The jail is a new iron and brick structure recently completed, standing on the northeast corner of the public square. The Hick house stands on the southwest corner, and the courthouse, with yard surrounding, occupies the centre of the square. I had a front room at the Hicks house, and was awakened out of a sound sleep by a voice, shouting "Close up there, don't you hear? Don't you close up there?" At the same time, I heard the rattle of horse's hoofs.

Springing from my bed, I saw through the window a band of about eighty mounted men galloping in from the southeast corner of the square, swinging around in front of the hotel, then to the right, toward the jail. "Halt! Keep everybody off!" came the command in the clear, ringing voice of the leader. Then a knocking at the jail door, distinctly audible across the square, for it was near one o'clock, and everything was quiet. Knock, knock, rattled against the door, and the leader calling "Mr. Alexander! Mr. Alexander!" "We won't break in, men, but we must get in." Up to this time I thought it was a sheriff's posse bringing in more prisoners from Pickettsville, sixteen being already in there under charge of being connected with the shooting on Saturday night. Startled by the words, "We'll not break in, men," I dressed and went down, but could not see a soul on the street. I saw, however, the long row of horses and men in front of the jail, the group at the jail door; heard the hum of voices along the line, the command "keep back," and retired toward the hotel.

Here I met two other just awakened men, and seeing some slip over among the trees of the court-yard, we all started, but went over to the opposite side of the square—going towards the jail, until a sepulchral voice bellowed, "Halt!" and we stopped. I saw now that the men were masked, and understood their mission. They were after the sixteen negroes, and were growing more vociferous in their call for the jailer, while continually, from one end of the line to the other, men were yelling in hollow tones, "Watch out, watch out!" "Halt, no excitement here."

"WE MEAN BUSINESS."

The mules and horses of the dismounted men were grouped along the line. A few outside the line were riding up and down, exchanging words with the few town people gathered about at a safe distance, when suddenly there was a command, "Fifteen men follow me!" and a lot of men dashed away on foot from the jail door across the street into the court-house, from whence they soon issued again, blowing a shrill whistle, uttering yells of triumph, and rushing back to the jail, dashed into the jail door. Then there was momentary quiet followed by exultant expressions from those outside. I passed around and got into the court-yard on the face directly opposite the jail, which was only across the street. The full moon lit up the indescribable scene, obscured by occasional clouds, and horses, mules, men and most of the grotesque costumes, were distinctly visible. Ten or twenty town people were inside the court-yard, intently watching the scene. A few on the fence kept up a running banter of words with some of the masked party, as "hello, ain't you thirsty?" "Come and take a drink," "look at the old gal," (referring to one with a black gown on), "say Bob Lee, thought you was killed at Shiloh." Answered in assumed voice, "Yes, I was killed at Shiloh, but I'm here," "we are ready," etc.

In the meantime, darkness and quiet seemed to be in the jail. It was difficult to think off that Guy Fawkes crowd enacting the terrible tragedy that soon followed. About 2 o'clock there was a rush at the door of the jail—a whistle sounded—the order "mount!" given, and we saw a dark looking group being pushed ahead of the column, which was immediately put in motion directly eastward.

They were whiskered along the courthouse fence—but not a cry—not a groan from the doomed men. A rattle of hoofs, a cloud of dust, and nothing was to be seen of them.

We went across to the jail and plied jailer and prisoners with questions. The jailer knew nothing—had not gone up, saw nothing, was moody and silent, and his women folks frightened and silent, but the prisoners said they had taken sixteen.

We stood silently, involuntarily looking down the road taken by the band, and soon we heard "bang!" Our hearts paused—"bang!" "volley," "bang!" Some counted the shots, others said "It's awful"—others, "The negroes are gone." A few of us started off in the direction of the shots, others followed, and about half a mile away, just beyond a bridge over a small stream and down the right hand side road we found six bodies lying in various positions apart, but all within three or four yards square. Four were dead but the pulse of two still beat. Matches were lit, and by the flitting light we examined them, called to them, but no answer. Finally a motion, the ropes binding their hands are cut, and both groaned and then spoke. Water was called for and brought in a hat, and the wounded men placed in as comfortable a position as possible and a physician sent for, I went back.

UTTERLY HORRIFIED.

On my way to the hotel I saw some negro women and begged them to go to the wounded men, but they were too thoroughly frightened.

About ten A. M. a young man came dashing into Trenton with the fearful news that 300 armed negroes were marching on Trenton to avenge the killing of the negroes last night. There was a momentary paralysis as men thought of the possibility of such a body of infuriated, blood-thirsty negroes into town. There were blanched faces of strong men as they shut stores, left the streets and shops and hurried home. Swift curries shot out on the road, one by one, with awful dread on their faces; women and children gathered in groups, trembling with terror at danger so awful. One group of ladies I had seen a few minutes before came in on a visit all radiant, now they were in fearful despair. The teaching institute, in session here, broke up instantly, and the male members either went to their families or to secure guns. Men hurried to and fro as if in painful uncertainty whether to gather on the square, or stay with the loved ones.

The very air seemed nervous with fearful apprehensions. Those that secured guns finally began to mass on the square. New scouts were sent out, ammunition divided, and Maj. Gay soon had sixty men with all manner of fire arms from old single-barrelled pistols to a double-barrelled shot gun, in line. He commenced at once to drill them and form a nucleus for the constantly arriving recruits. Fear began to vanish as the people saw their means of defense, and the first chill of terror was over. The scouts began to return, too, without having seen any negro troops. Still, they "had heard." Doubters arose with each accession of assurance, and two wagon loads of badly frightened women and girls, were not enough to renew the fight when it was found that they had only "heard," but they had heard great things and had left their homes at a moment's notice.

By this time doubts of any armed negroes being about were openly expressed, and some even suggested the had sent in the report to cover up their tracks. Finally after an age of apprehension, terrors, blood resolve and dreams of carnage, attended by all the circumstances of the most horrid possible war, the terrible report was boiled down to something like these facts: Some three or four negroes called in the morning on a farmer named Gleason, living about five miles from Trenton. He was in the field, and Mrs. Gleason sent the negroes to him; while they were there another small party of negroes (none of whom are said to have been armed) came up. Mrs. Gleason, influenced by the uniqueness in the community, succeeding the affair of Saturday night, and came tensified, blew her horn and alarmed the neighbors, to whom rushing in she told her fears, which grew at once into all manner of frightful rumors, among which I heard at Pickettsville that her house was surrounded and she and other women murdered; that 500 armed negroes were marching on Pickettsville and Trenton, etc.

I went from Trenton to Humboldt and from there to Pickettsville, and found apprehensions, fears and excitement, but could not ascertain of any actual fighting or any one being hurt or molested.

"And what did you understand had been done with the ten negroes carried away by the masked men?" inquired the reporter.

"I understood that they were all shot a few miles out from Trenton," was the reply.

"I might mention here that every man I talked to, without a single exception, denounced this outrage."

Temple Bar.

The nerves of London were yesterday thrown in a flutter by a report that Temple Bar showed symptoms of collapse. The rumor proved correct, and so great is the respect entertained for the venerable but inconvenient structure, that crowds of persons gathered on the spot in the fond expectation that they might have the luck of witnessing its last moments. They were, however, doomed to disappointment, for, although in the earlier part of the day Temple Bar was crumbling, sinking fast, it was in the afternoon supported by props, and the latest bulletins pronounced it to be, if not out of danger, at least, as well as can be expected. Its most distressing symptoms are an evident tendency to bury itself beneath the ground; and if left to itself there can be little doubt it would partially effect its object. The question remains whether it is not injudicious and unfeeling to interfere with it. Of course it must not be allowed to injure any one by its descent, but it is inclined to come down it might be as well to let it have its own way. There can be little doubt that it has been seriously affected by the intended demolition of Northumberland House, and probably argues that if age commands no respect at one end of the Strand, it is not likely to command much at the other. The fate of the Northumberland House to-day may be its own to-morrow, and rather than submit to the indignity of being pulled down, it wisely prefers coming down of its own accord. If, however, its life is to be prolonged, it should at least be treated with the consideration due to its years. It has not had any head stuck over it for more than a century. The last heads that adorned it were those of Fletcher and Townley, whose devotion to Prince Charlie led to their decapitation. These two heads remained above the gateway till 1672, when they fell down, and Temple Bar has since been headless. Perhaps it would like a head or two occasionally, and though we have no rebels' heads available, we have a constant supply of Thames mystery heads that would answer the purpose.—Pull Mall Gazette, Aug. 1.

AN EXTRAORDINARY ROMANCE.

An American Girl Succeeds to a Title and a Fortune—A Secret Marriage.

(Elmira Gazette, Aug. 21.)

Not long since there was published in the Gazette an allusion to a romance which had for its home the village of Dundee, in Yates county. Since that time new and important developments have appeared in connection with that story, and we are enabled to lay before our readers something of a connected narrative of the events hinted at.

In 1865 a gentleman of high birth and great wealth in England came to this country, to travel for pleasure and to study the scenery and people of the new world. A lover of nature in its most varied and picturesque character, he spent some time in central New York, going about among our beautiful lakes, and tarrying upon their highly cultivated shores. These rambles he came to the quiet village of Dundee, where he made home for some time with a Baptist clergyman named Currier. While there he fell into companionship with the daughter of a well-to-do gentleman named Bliven. The girl was at that time sixteen years of age, handsome, engaging and sensible. The acquaintance soon ripened into a sort of romantic friendship, and at last the foreigner, whom we may as well designate by his proper name and title—Sir John Gordon Talmadge—offered his hand to Candace, which she accepted. The direct narrative is to the effect that the two were united by the Rev. Mr. Currier, who was pledged to secrecy concerning the marriage for the term of one year. The parents of Candace were not informed of the action of their daughter, nor did the knowledge of come to any of the villagers. Soon after the wedding, Sir John left his young bride and returned to his home across the water, having promised to record the marriage in due form and to send her a portion of his fortune. He was to return, and he would return within the year and take his wife to England. The year went past, and Sir John did not come. Meantime, Rev. Mr. Currier, the only person in America, beside the young wife, who knew of the transaction, died, and his secret died with him. Another year passed, and five, then ten, almost twenty, and still the waited-for husband did not return to make good his promise, nor did any tidings, we understand, reach the partially blind and feeble Candace. At last, in March last, we believe, through the instrumentality of a personal advertisement in one of the New York papers, the long silence was broken, and tidings for which the Dundee bride, now grown to almost middle age, had so long waited, were received.

DEATH OF SIR JOHN GORDON TALMADGE.

It appears that the return of Sir John to England without his American wife was for the purpose of arranging matters satisfactorily with his parents, who he knew would be indisposed to receive his bride if she were taken to them without prior knowledge of their son's step. Shortly after his return home it happened that while out riding with his mother one day the horses took fright, ran away, threw the two out, killing his mother, and very seriously injuring Sir John. From this affliction, however, he recovered partially, and in due time set out for America to reclaim his wife. As if adverse fate directed his every movement, when he reached Liverpool he was taken severely ill, and for a long time he lay vacillating, as it were, between life and death. Though recovering, his illness so preyed upon his mind that he became demented, in which condition he lived all these years, unable to make known the object for which he was journeying when sickness overtook him.

In the latter part of last winter sanity strangely returned to the afflicted man, but only for a short interval before death relieved him of that life which had been a burden. During this lucid interval recollection of his earlier life came back to him, and the secret wife in Dundee was uppermost in his thoughts. He made known to his brother, now Sir Alfred Talmadge, the true story of his marriage in this country, willed his immense fortune of $4,000,000, half to his brother and sister, and the other half to his wife, in case she might be found alive. He further pledged his brother to send a special messenger to America for the purpose of hunting up his wife.

HUNTING THE BRIDE OF TWENTY YEARS AGO.

In pursuance of these pledges, a messenger was, as early as possible after the demise of Sir John, despatched to this country with instructions to find the bride by advertisement or by personal search. The advertising was done, as we have seen, but the messenger, following the directions given him by the husband before death, came from New York to Dundee soon after landing. At the latter place he found the parents of the lady, who directed him to Elmira, where she was then visiting. This was in the latter part of May last. On arriving in this city the messenger inquired for the residence of Charles Rowland, brother-in-law of the lady whom he sought. He repaired to that gentleman's residence, 457 East Water street, where he found the long-waiting and long-sought bride of twenty years ago. The lady happened to be alone at the time the messenger called. The commingling of astonishment, pleasure and sorrow which contended for mastery as the sadly romantic history of her long-ago bridegroom was unfolded, can be better imagined than told.

LADY TALMADGE.

Soon after this denouement Mrs. Talmadge went to Washington, where she is now living with another sister. Mrs. Rowland was at first reluctant to say much about the affair, but she finally talked freely and interestingly concerning her sister's romance. She stated that the messenger from England left with her sister a considerable package; also letters and documents from her late husband. She said Candace talked little about the strange events, and it was probable she had gone to Washington for the purpose of avoiding impertinent inquiries. Mrs. Talmadge had expressed herself entirely satisfied with the results of the strange messenger's visit, but whether or not the documents contained a conveyance of the half of Sir John's estate, as it has been said he left it, Mrs. Rowland was not prepared to say. It is understood by her friends that she will before a great while be visited by her brother-in-law, Sir Alfred Talmadge, with whom she will go to England to possess her vast estate. The sister who shares equally with Sir Alfred also married against the parents' wishes. Her husband's name is Stanley. The last known of them they were at Key West, Florida. It is understood the surviving brother has instituted a search for this sister. Should she be found, it is likely a reunion of the family, including our Dundee girl, will be had.

HOW THE SECRET WAS KEPT.

Lady Talmadge's sister states that the clergyman who performed the secret marriage, twenty years ago came to her father's house two or three times during the year of pledged secrecy, evidently, determined to reveal what he had done. His manner is now remembered to have been singular, but at the time it attracted no unusual attention. He was a Baptist clergyman, and the Blivenses were Presbyterians, and at the time we speak of no relations socially required the singular calls from the former. It is also stated that the secrecy was maintained at the solicitation of the bride, the husband having urged her to go with him to her home and make known their new relation. This she refused to do out of respect for his wishes respecting his own family. A correspondence was maintained after Talmadge left, but Candace was always careful to dispose of the letters, and steadfastly retained her secret locked in her own heart.

A Suicide's Jump.

A terrible suicide occurred in this city this afternoon. A notorious character named James Cramsy repaired to the Kaal rock, on the banks of the river eight-fifty feet high, and, lying down, fell asleep, being in a half intoxicated condition. After an hour's slumber he arose and said to a person with him, who had been jumping, "I will give you a lesson, boys, and show you a leap."

Pulling off his shoes, he went to the edge of the rock, evidently to look for a place from which he could jump easily into the water below without striking on the rock. Running back from the edge, he exclaimed, "That's not much of a jump," and started for the leap. A man interfered, and caught him and held him back. Cramsy exclaiming, "What's the matter with you? Let me go!" Again he started for the edge, looked over and ran back for another start, and was caught the second time and a struggle took place and Cramsy struck one of his captors in the breast, crying, with an oath, "If you don't let me go I'll take you with me."

He was released and sat down about five minutes, and a man took a seat between him and the precipice. Cramsy said, "Let me jump, and I'll meet you at the furnace dock." In another moment he suddenly made a dash for the edge of the rock, shouting, "Now I'm off!" and, with a fearful spring, leaped out into the air and plunged feet first down a distance of eighty-five feet into the Hudson. It is stated that he turned once in the awful descent and struck the water sideways. Up to nine o'clock to night his body had not been found.—N. Y. Herald, Aug. 29.

Good Times Among the Lowly.

"Why you're a new comer, aren't you? haven't seen you before," we remarked to a lad of about twelve years as he was giving us a shine on Tuesday.

"Yes sir; ain't bin here before, but took it in this trip—lots of coal her, sir."

"Yes, where are you from?"

"Oh, I'm on my summer trip. I'm from New York—always take a run out o' town in the summer—done it for—oh, I d'n know how long. Like the country for a while."

"Well, are you having a good time?" "Havin' a good time? you bet (with a little laugh). Why ma' dinner costs 70 cents to-day—had a beefsteak and turn-maters an' a rice pudin', an' I got 35 cents yet. Umph! a good time? now you're a shoutin'!"

He was the happiest summer tourist we have seen this season and his cash capital was 35 cents but who can compute his satisfaction over that "beefsteak, turn-maters an' rice pudin'?"

Mrs. Jipe's Healthy Work.

Mrs. Jipe, of Greasy Point, Ill., after saving a cord of wood, digging five bushels of potatoes, milking twenty cows, carrying ten tubs of water, and doing a washing of ten dozen pieces, incidentally mentioned being tired. Mr. Jip said to her from a newspaper: "I believe that nothing would tend so effectually to get rid of these creations of weariness, and that overstimulation of the emotions, as a fair share of healthy work directed toward a definite object." Just here a can of Royal baking powder struck him in the abdomen. Following this came a stove lid, three pancakes, a rotten tomato, salt-cellar, bowl of buttermilk, and all the dough for Thursday's baking. It was evident she considered her lord a "definite object," and the fair share of work directed toward him was a little healthier than he would have desired.

FARM AND GRANGE.

Except Delaware and Connecticut, all the states now have state granges. There are subordinate granges in those states, and in all the territories except New Mexico and Arizona.

In some of the California granges the matter of inaugurating a rigorous and effective campaign, under the provisions of the squirrel nuisance abatement law, has been under consideration, and a determination is evinced to have the pests exterminated.

Grand Master Adams, in a letter to a Minnesota paper, says: "I fully agree with you that our order must not, as such, become a political organization, but I most earnestly hope that our members will be true to their duty as American citizens, and take an active and prominent part in holding the institutions and laws of our country."

At a meeting of Moreau grange, Morgan county, Mo., on March 28, last, the books were opened and $500 in $10 shares, subscribed at once, started a new year. The grange is now in operation, and turning out between fifty and sixty sides of leather a week. Heretofore the farmers sold the hides to St. Louis merchants; they sold to dealers who shipped to Boston, then back to Morgan county. Other granges are now going to follow the example of Moreau.

The grange mill at Waterford, Minnesota, has proved an undoubted success. Since the 25th of January last, it has exchanged with the farmers 12,000 bushels of wheat, equal to 287,500 pounds of flour. It is now turning out barrels of flour daily, which is shipped direct to this city, and commands a ready sale, receiving from 1,000 to 2,000 bushels of wheat a day, at $1.04 a bushel, and exchanging 150 to 200 bushels, equal to 30 or 40 barrels of flour, the exchange paying the running expenses.

Mr. Saunders, founder of the order of Patrons of Husbandry, is seeking to devise an improved method of insurance for farmers. Another of his plans is to have a portion of the funds of the National Grange—which now amounts to some $35,000—expended for libraries for subordinate granges. He is ready to edit and interest of the order are in a measure provided for, inasmuch as each society has a regular officer, called the lecturer, whose duty is to give special attention to the science of agriculture, and the improvements that are made from time to time in the departments in which husbandry are interested.

Hon. James B. Beck, of Kentucky, in a recent speech in his state, gave some advice to the grangers. He advised them to resolve not to vote for any man for congress, or for the state legislature, who is in any way connected with any of the great corporations or organizations which are seeking special legislation or exclusive privileges. He asserts that it is impossible to have just and honest legislation, state or federal, so long as representatives are who owe their election to, or are interested in great moneyed corporations or monopolies. He believes that the grangers have it within their power to prevent this evil—if it has not already reached the point where a corrective should be applied—without departing from their determination to exclude politics from their organizations.

SOILING GRASS SEED FOR PERMANENT PASTURE.—A correspondent at Danville, Va., propounds the following, to which we submit reply:

"I have about ten acres in corn, which has been thoroughly cultivated and the crop is doing finely. The soil is a sandy loam, well drained, lies immediately on the river, produces corn, oats, or wheat, and never fails to make a good crop. The ten acres I wish to seed down to grass for permanent meadow about the first of October. With the above facts will you furnish the formula? State distinctly the quantity and variety of seed to the acre."

For a permanent pasture we would recommend the sowing this autumn, on each acre, one bushel of orchard grass, one gallon timothy seed, half a gallon of white clover, and six pounds of Kentucky blue grass. In the spring sow one gallon of clover seed per acre. The ground should be well prepared.

ADVICE TO FARMERS.—An experience "cotton seller" of Albany sends us the following advice to farmers for publication:

Have your gin and brush in good order.

Gather your cotton clear and dry, and gin it dry to avoid napping.

Pack your cotton as clear of gin tags as possible, and put your cotton the same amount of notes that falls under the gin flue.

Don't gin up your nice cotton and cotton gathered after a rain together.

Don't, if possible, put two kinds of cotton in the same bale, and above everything don't put up mixed cotton or false packed.

Gather your cotton as early as possible. Poor cotton will be hard to sell this season at any price. —Danville Journal.

COMFORTS AND LUXURIES OF THE FARM.—There is class of farmers who are living only to grasp more acres. Their farms can never be large enough, nor can their workmen or themselves ever do quite enough work. They cannot be satisfied with the income of the farm, nor could they be with that of any other business. But those who understand that the highest object of labor is not simply to make money, but to provide the largest amount of the means of improvement and innocent enjoyment that the world affords, can make the pursuit of agriculture furnish more luxuries that really contribute to the well-being than any other employment requiring an equal amount of capital. Their farms are not so large as to make slaves of themselves and their sons, and their wives and their daughters are not worn out with incessant drudgery. Their dooryards are blossomed with flowers, their tables are supplied with many varieties of well-grown delicious fruit, their houses are made cheerful by the influence of books and music, and a taste for the pure and innocent enjoyment of life is developed in their children. Here and there a farmer's home exemplifies all the contentment and happiness possible to a race doomed to labor and disappointment. —Practical Farmer.

DEVELOPING THE FERTILITY OF THE SOIL.—Rain, sunshine, alternate heat and cold, together with the powerful action of electricity, disintegrating, pulverizing and dissolving the rocky surface of the earth from time immemorial, for the production of a soil adapted to the production of useful plants which, in the process of time become adequate to the sustenance of living creatures. A fertile soil must be formed before useful plants can grow; and useful vegetables, grain and fruit must grow out of the soil, or animals and human beings cannot propagate their species. But pulverized granite, ground gypsum, marble dust, or the four of sand, or slate, if ground ever so fine, cannot be denominated a soil. Still, if the surface of a barren country were covered a foot or more in depth with finely pulverized rock, say the flour of granite, the unavailable fertility in that mellow bed could be easily developed, so that it would yield one hundred bushels of Indian corn per acre, or forty bushels of flax, or three tons of prime hay per acre.

Death of Uncle John Harper.

[From the Frankfort, Ky., Yeoman.] John Harper, Sr., familiarly known as "Uncle John Harper," the well known thoroughbred stock raiser and distinguished turfman, died at his residence in Woodford county last Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, and was buried on Thursday afternoon in the family burial ground on the farm where he resided. In accordance with his request, made during his illness, which was protracted, he was buried without religious ceremony or other formality. There were, however, present at his interment forty or fifty of his neighbors, who assembled to pay respect to the memory of their old friend. The deceased was in his 77th or 78th year, and had for the last two years been quite feeble in health, though he did not relinquish his attendance on the turf, or his attention to his race horses, until compelled to take to his bed in his last illness.

He was of a plain frugal family of Pennsylvania Dutch origin, though long settled in Kentucky in the locality in which he died, near Spring station, in Woodford county, twelve miles east from this city. He was one of five children, only one of whom, a brother, ever married. Another brother, Adam, was killed in 1874, by a band of guerrillas, who visited his house for plunder. His brother Jacob and sister Elizabeth were, on the 14th of September, 1874, murdered in their beds by parties still unknown. The unmarried brothers and maiden sister had amassed a large property by frugality in farming and rearing race horses. They held in common, and all of it became the property of John Harper, as the survivor.

We learn that he leaves, by will, the homestead, including six hundred acres of the finest blue grass land in Kentucky, together with all his race horses (including Longfellow), to his nephew, known as "Little Frank Harper."

The deceased has for more than thirty years been identified with the turf in Kentucky, being remarkable for his good judgment, as well as his skill in the collection and training of racers. Though familiar to Kentucky turfmen for so many years, it was not until he took Longfellow to the east in 1871 that he achieved a national reputation as a turfman. Since the retirement of Longfellow he has remained at home, prosecuting his business, and was rarely seen away from home except when attending the races at Lexington.

Madame Bazaine and Other Devoted Wives.

Madame Bazaine's name may be added to the list of noble women, devoted wives, who, disdaining personal risk, effected the escape of their husbands from captivity and danger. There are several such instances, but our readers will most readily recall to mind the two in which a Scotch and a French lady honorably took part. In February, 1718, the earl of Nithsdale, condemned to death for participation in the earl of Mar's rebellion against George I., was adroitly liberated from the tower of London by the devotion and cleverness of his wife. A still later instance is that of the countess de Lavalette, who was postmistress of Paris during Napoleon's reign of the hundred days, and whose escape, he being then under sentence of death, was effected by his wife, who exchanged clothes with him, and took his place in prison, on December 20, 1815, while he passed through the guard unsuspected, and finally escaped from France by the assistance of three Englishmen—Hutchinson, Wilson and Bruce—whose conduct in this case won the world's applause. Madame de Lavalette was not punished for her wifely act; but the pressure on her mind was so great that she was deprived of her reason for many months. She survived her heroic deed for nearly forty years, her death not having occurred until 1855. She was a niece of the empress Josephine, and consequently nearly related to Napoleon. It is curious that though Lord Byron wrote a highly eulogistic poem on Madame de Lavalette, it is not to be found in any of Murray's editions of his works.

Madame Bazaine became a wife in her native Mexico, some nine years ago, is now only twenty-six. When Marshal Bazaine was sent to the Isle of St. Marguerite, his wife and children were permitted to visit him at least once a week, but under restrictions which must have been galling to all parties. It is known that she regards her husband as the victim of political spite—a veteran soldier condemned for his Bonaparte proclivities by a military court, the president of which was an Orleans prince, uncle of one of the pretenders to the crown of France. —Philadelphia Press.

The Dried Fruit of America.

[Boston Traveller.]

Up to within a short period the United States has been dependent entirely upon the south of Europe for its luxury of dried figs, etc. The total amount imported by the United States is not less, in round figures, than $15,000,000. Several years ago California started on a large scale the cultivation of the grape, and it was successful. Succeeding this came the experiment of drying the fruit to a raisin. Samples of these raisins were sent to Europe, and when shown to Mr. Clemens, the great raisin factor of Malaga, he remarked that in time the California raisin would supply the United States home market to the exclusion of the foreign product. California is now coming to the front in this matter, and from recent experiments made by the Alden Evaporator it has become evident that the United States is soon to be made independent of foreign supplies in raisins, currants, prunes, etc. There is another article of dried fruit that bids fair to become important in the commerce of this country, and that is dried peaches. In Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia there are immense peach orchards covering hundreds of acres; by a new process the peach is now pared, sliced and dried in such a manner as to make it one of the most delicious dessert dishes. In Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois the trade in dried raspberries and blackberries has become immense, and there are houses in Chicago that can fill on demand an order for 500 barrels. The best air, instead of the old process of drying in the sun or in the kiln, has proved of great value. The enhanced prices at which the foreign fruit dealers have held their product, the past four or five years have driven our importers to the necessity of reducing their orders and compelling the shipments to be made on consignment; and now that it is demonstrated that our western slope can furnish all more than is sufficient for home consumption, we may look for a speedy release from foreign dependence.

TILL 15th OCTOBER.

ATLANTA, GA., August 30, 1874.

W. S. Grisham, Esq.

DEAR SIR—As you were anxious that I should test the "Dade Coal" before purchasing a car load, I drop this note to say that, on last evening, I did so to my entire satisfaction.

I had the fire made in the usual way, used only the customary amount of kindling material. The coal ignited freely, burned brightly, and as long as any other coal I ever tried, and invited no odor that could be detected.

I fired the coal at 6½ o'clock last evening; at 12 o'clock, without being replenished it was still all aglow, and promised to burn much longer. This morning I examined the yellowish gray ashes in the hearth and found little or no cinders. Mr. Jas. Ormond and Judge Collier and Mr. T. C. Mayson were called in to see the coal burning. They were highly pleased at what they saw. Judge Collier called this morning to examine the ashes. The result of the test is quite satisfactory to all.

Notify me of the arrival of my car load and will hand you the amount for same. Respectfully,

C. P. CASSIN.

BUSINESS UNIVERSITY.

MOORE'S

Southern Business University.

THE LEADING AND BEST

Principal School in the South.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 27, 1874.

TO THE PUBLIC:

We, the undersigned, as a simple act of justice to acknowledge merit, subjoin the following testimonial of our high appreciation of Moore's Southern Business University, which institution we heartily recommend to the entire South, as worthy of the utmost confidence and esteem. The progress which this excellent school has already made, as indicated by its present complement of students, is gratifying in the extreme.

THIS ESTABLISHED INSTITUTION

now in its sixteenth year, is fast becoming popular and deservedly so, for there can be no enterprise more laudable or meritorious, none more productive of beneficial results when efficiently managed. Its present presiding officer, Prof. B. F. Moore, is the man for the place. He is eminently fitted for the position he fills. As a business educator he is unsurpassed, and as an energetic, indefatigable worker, he is second to none. He also enjoys unlimited reputation and influence in business circles, and in response to a crying demand for an institution in which our young men may prepare themselves for usefulness hereafter, he has turned from perhaps more lucrative and inviting fields, to engage in his present noble undertaking. This school supplies a need that has long been felt in the South. It proposes to educate young and middle-aged men for the duties of practical business life, and its past history attests how well it has thus far succeeded, and gives the encouraging assurance that it is destined to achieve a still more brilliant success in the future. A business university necessarily possesses great utility. No elaborate argument is required to enforce the truth of this statement. Educate the young for business and they will make business men. Their attention will be thus directed to every branch of commercial enterprise in a way that will largely influence the future prosperity of the South. A taste for business, so to speak, must be cultivated, and in no way can this be done more effectually than by attendance upon a first-class business institution. Thus will be diffused the knowledge and principles of business life, and thus will we become a business people, enterprising, industrious and successful.

Prof. Moore has built up an institution of his own. Whatever measure of success he has hitherto achieved, has been attributable to his unflinching energy and exertion. He hoists his own banner, inscribed with his own name, and the time will come when he may proudly herald his own victory.

Each department of this excellent school is well officered. Prof. Erwin, at the head of the book-keeping department, is a practical adept in the science of accounts and his lucid instructions combined with his ever courteous demeanor, have endeared him to each student. We can bear sincere testimony to the merits of Prof. McDowell, the accomplished teacher of mathematics. As for the writing department we boldly assert that no one can be found to rival a more artistic pen than Prof. Cagle, or excel in fine specimens of his art that adorn the interior college walls. He is wedded to his art, and as a penman he is equalled by few, surpassed by none.

But time would fail us to enumerate all the excellent features of this institution. Suffice it, however, to say, that everything connected with this school declares it to be what it really is, 'the Best Practical Business School in the South,' and by the prestige of his own name and influence, if the people will only bestow upon it that extent of patronage and support which is his due, if the Southern States will only reward him as he deserves, Moore's Southern Business University will, in a few years, be a name familiar to every section of the South, and its usefulness in the future, still more than in the past, be extended to those who desire to promote their own interests, as well as the future prosperity of our country.

SAVED BY TRAMPS.

Stealing a Ride from Davenport
Iowa—Three Days Without Food.

(From the Albany Argus.)

A party of tramps who stole into a freight car on Sunday night, with the intention of getting a free ride from Schenectady to Albany, heard groans proceeding from a tin of oats in one end of the car, and, upon investigation, discovered a man there, half dead from exhaustion. One of the tramps had a bottle of liquor, out of which he gave the poor fellow a drink, and on the arrival of the train at West Albany procured a couple of sandwiches for him. These he swallowed with all the avidity of a starving man, and was then helped from the car to the ground. He attempted to walk away, but had scarcely gone five steps when he fell to the ground insensible. He was picked up and brought to an Albany police station, whence he was carried on a stretcher to St. Peter's Hospital.

As soon as consciousness was restored he said his name was John Kelly, a Philadelphian, and formally a soldier in Camp Douglas in Utah. Receiving his discharge about a month ago, he started for home, but stopped at Omaha on his way, and stayed long enough to lose all his money at a gaming table. He continued his journey as far as Davenport, Iowa, stealing a ride whenever he could and walking the rest of the distance. We give the conclusion of the tale in his own words:

I arrived at Davenport last Wednesday, and could get nothing to do or to eat. Early Thursday morning I entered the car in which I was found, before it was locked up, having noticed the day before that it was bound east. I secreted myself in the oats, and soon after the car started the dust from the oats, owing to the motion of the car, filled my ears, nose and mouth, so that I could not breathe. While confined in the car I made two attempts to open the door, but was unable to do so. I became impatient, and knowing that I was bound east, when I was aroused by a racket outside the car, and soon after the door opened and three or four fellows entered. They were making a noise, and I endeavored to tell them to stop, when they discovered and dragged me out of the car. I had nothing to eat or drink from Wednesday noon until this morning, when the fellows who came in the car gave me something to eat. I, who appears to be a stout, athletic young man, seemed yesterday but little the worse for his terrible ride of a thousand miles, and will undoubtedly recover, although considerable care must be taken. But for his opportune discovery by the tramps he would have continued on to New York, and in all probability been taken out dead, as he could not have survived many hours in the condition in which he was found. All the food he ate on Wednesday before starting from Davenport was two pears. The walk from Omaha to Davenport was some three hundred miles, making in all about thirteen hundred miles he has traveled since he left Omaha three weeks ago.

The Widow of Henry J. Raymond Robbed.

(From the Brooklyn Eagle.)

A daring highway robbery was committed this morning in Adelphi street. The victim was Mrs. Juliet Raymond, the widow of the great journalist, Henry J. Raymond, the founder of the New York Times. The lady has just returned from an extended absence in Europe, and has taken up her residence temporarily with friends at No. 363 Adelphi street. At about ten o'clock this morning, Mrs. Raymond started out to company with a lady friend, intending to take a Gates avenue car and ride to the ferry. She carried her pocketbook and a fifty-cent stamp in her left hand, and a valise in her right hand. They walked along Adelphi street to Greene avenue, a distance of half a block, and there being no car in sight on the down track, stood near the curbstone in conversation. Neither lady paid any attention to a poorly dressed young man who came around the avenue in front of them, and were consequently taken completely by surprise when in passing them he turned suddenly and snatched the stamps and pocketbook from Mrs. Raymond's hand, and ran quickly off with the booty in the direction of DeKalb avenue.

Mrs. Raymond gave a scream, and her friend exclaimed: "Why that man has taken your pocketbook." A crowd quickly collected and gave chase to the desperate thief, and at that moment, from a car going up town, jumped Captain McLaughlin, who had been down to police headquarters making his morning call on the superintendent. A half a dozen citizens told him what had happened in a breath, and he started off from a howl the fleet-footed officer was after the thief. The fellow was now over half a block distant, and in a fair way of escaping from his pursuers, at whom he frequently launched threats of "shooting their heads off if they stopped him." He saw the captain coming after him, and made greater efforts to escape. The flight and the chase was now an exciting one, and a crowd of at least two hundred persons had been attracted by it.

The thief ran along Adelphi street to DeKalb avenue, then along that thoroughfare to Portland avenue, up Portland avenue to Lafayette street, down Lafayette street to Cumberland street, and thence to Greene avenue again. The captain gained on the fellow all the while, who, seeing that escape was impossible, threw the pocketbook into the gutter and sank exhausted to the ground just as the strong arm of the officer grasped his neck. The captain picked the pocketbook up, and clasped the handcuffs on his prisoner, and then, followed by a crowd, who cheered him lustily for his clever arrest, conveyed the thief to justice Riley's court, on the corner of Myrtle avenue and Adelphi street.

Mrs. Raymond was sent for and seemed to be greatly surprised, although, well pleased, that her property had been so quickly recovered, as she had given it up as lost. At the request of the justice she preferred a complaint against the thief of stealing her pocketbook, containing one certified gold check for $200 on the Merchants' National Bank of Burlington, Vermont, and $50 in currency. The man was then arraigned, and gave his name as Eugene Lane, aged twenty-one years, and said that he lived in Plainfield, New Jersey. He pleaded guilty, and without any comment, justice Riley promptly committed him to await the action of the grand jury. Lane is a hard-featured looking desperado, about five feet six inches in height, red hair and mustache, and carried a large knife and revolver.

A Mysterious Hermit.

(Boston Advertiser.)

In Grew's woods, near Hyde park, there lives a strange person, who has long been known as "The Hermit." But little is known of the man, as he is very reticent on the subject of his life. His name is James Gately, and he was born in Cheshire county, England, 1805. He is well educated, is accomplished in the arts of drawing and painting, and was probably sent to school at Eton. Twenty-six or twenty-seven years ago he left England. It has been ascertained, however, that he was not to return to twenty-five years. This is a mysterious point in his life which no one can explain. It is said that he fell in love with the daughter of some titled person, was rejected, and that his present seclusion is from that cause; but this may have arisen from his refusal to speak to ladies for several years after he voluntarily shut himself out from society. On arriving at Boston, "the hermit" plunged into the forest and built himself a hut under an overhanging ledge in the dense garden woods. Here he supported himself on game, which was then abundant, and devoted much time to the study of ornithology. Finally the advances of civilization led him to seek a more secluded spot, and he purchased a little tract of land, his present position, and built a 10 by 12 hut, which has been somewhat enlarged since.

Here this old man has lived all alone with his dogs and pets, of which he has had many; and although his time of exile has now expired, he seems to have no disposition to return to his native land. He has seen the town grow up like magic and houses penetrate his very woods, but still he remains. He has a very fine collection of birds and animals, and his fame in the vicinity has been such that he reaps a harvest from their exhibition to the many which seek him out. This strange man evidently has some property in England, for he has several times received remittances of money through the British consul, with presents of valuable dogs from the same source. Many ornithologists have visited Mr. Gately, and it is affirmed that in various works upon the subject his views have been frequently entertained. There is a mysterious something which clouds the life of the hermit. He has excited much attention at different times, and many have evinced a strong desire to know the story of his life, and the cause that shut him from the world for the last twenty-seven years.

It is strange yet true, that as a rule it is the brightest intellects, the best members of society become addicted to this disease of appetite. A habit which makes them slaves, bedevils their minds, ruins their dispositions, and gives them in their more natural moments a hatred of self as well as a feeling that everybody despises them—to such an extent that society has no charms. But thanks to the Giver of all good, this morbid, terrible habit, and degraded condition, as well as all of the desire and feeling for opiate in any form is soon removed by this remarkable antidote, entirely so, and the weakened body and mind are invigorated, and renewed. I need not, therefore, let me ask you, in the name of suffering humanity to pass this on. By so doing you may reap the reward of those who do good. DELAY NOT.

One hundred and eleven boarding pupils attend this School, from fifteen Southern States. From Prof. F. H. Smith, L. D., University, Va.

The Wesleyan Female Institute deserves the brilliant success it enjoys. Having had a daughter under Mr. Harris' care, during the present session, my observations lead me to believe his school to be one of the best of Female Seminaries which adorn the State. FRANCIS H. SMITH.

EYE AND EAR INSTITUTE.

87 WHITEHALL STREET, ATLANTA, GA.,

J. W. GURLEY, M. D., Surgeon in Charge.

WITH THE OTOSCOPE FOR EXAMINING THE EAR, the Ophthalmoscope for examining the Eye, Laryngoscope for the Throat, he is able to detect, and treat successfully, troubles that have heretofore been considered incurable. As to his success in the treatment of Eye diseases, he invites attention to the following certificates:

ANDERSON, S. C., August 1, 1873.

This is to certify that I have been blind for the last three years, during which time I have spent several hundred dollars in trying to obtain relief, but without success. I had almost despaired of ever being able to see, when Dr. J. W. Gurley informed me that my case was Cataract, and by an operation, he believed that he could restore my sight. I consented, and on the 15th of February last, he operated upon my eyes. On the seventh day after, I was able to distinguish objects at a distance. My sight has improved ever since, and now (August 1st) feel that, with the aid of my glasses, I can see as well as any person of my age (67), and am able to attend to all my business—which renders me a happy man, being brought from darkness to light.

MATTHEW SNIPES, WILLIAMSTON, South Carolina.

Dr. Gurley operated on my grandson for crossed eyes, and I can testify to his skill as an Eye Surgeon, by the happy results obtained in this case. The horrible deformity is completely removed, and the young man is rendered happy.

WILLIS ALLEN, BRADLEY'S MILLS, Abbeville C. H., S. C.

I was operated on for Cataract by a skilled surgeon of Augusta, Ga., and after being under his care for about four weeks, was discharged in a worse condition than when I went to him, inflammation having deprived me of the amount of vision I had before the operation. In this condition I consulted Dr. J. W. Gurley, who took my case in hand, and on the fifth day after, I was able to return to my family with the eyesight restored. Dr. Gurley's method of operating and after treatment are different and less painful than any I have undergone.

J. E. ROBINSON.

Other references can be furnished as to patients already cured under his treatment. Arrangements have been made by which patients can obtain board and rooms at from $20 to $40 per month, where they will be under the personal supervision of the surgeon in charge.
